9:00 Improv in the Language Class workshop

Dr. Lauren Esposito, Writing, Rhetoric and Composition Lecturer at Syracuse University, will present on improvisational theater's role in language development. She will teach participants some improv techniques useful to World Language teachers. If you are interested in incorporating more play-based language acquisition activities in your classes, this workshop is for you! Improv is a fun, engaging way for students to create with language and practice in a judgment-free environment. Presentation in English, applicable to all languages.

Certificates will be available after the conclusion of the workshop.

12:00 Lunch and Organization Business meeting for AATF and AATG held separately!
